SCOPE AND CONTENT NOTE

Record Group 210, Department of Economic and Community Development, spans the period 1953-1984. The record group consists of subject files concerning the daily activities of the department. In processing this collection, the records were left in as close to the original order as possible. The collection gives good insight into the efforts by the Department of Economic and Community Development to improve the quality of life for Tennesseans through recruitment of corporations and the promotion of tourism in Tennessee.

The Department of Economic and Community Development was created in 1972 by the 87th General Assembly. Its original function was to coordinate development services to communities, businesses, and industries in the state. The original department only had three divisions; Administration and Support Services, Industrial Development, and the Energy Division. The Industrial Development Division was already in existence as the Industrial Development Office, housed within the Governor's Office. The 1972 Act transferred this Office to the Department. As the department began, it was under the guidance of the Industrial and Agricultural Commission.

When processing this collection, 7 major divisions were found within the records; Administration Division, Community Development Division, Industrial Development Division, Media and Communications Division, Office of Business Enterprise, Research, Planning and Evaluation Division, and Resort, Vacation and Tourism Planning Division. Records for the Energy Office were not found in the group of records processed.

The Office of Business Enterprise was known within the state as the Office of Minority Business Enterprise. The Office came into existence in 1977 by the 90th General Assembly, though the work of the Office actually began in 1974 under the Direction of Newt Solomon. The Office was created to assist minority owned business in the state. The files in this record group show the extensive efforts that the state undertook to help minority business prosper.

Among the routine items included in the collection, there are several interesting items as well. Within the Industrial Development Division files, there is an extensive collection of photographs of Tennessee businesses. These photographs were taken to be used in the "Tennessee Thrusts" newsletter that went to business owners across the state. The photographs are from the period 1959-1972, when the Industrial Development Office was housed within the Governor's Office. These photographs offer an interesting look into the development of industry in Tennessee. The original photographs will not be destroyed after filming the collection.

Also of interest in the Industrial Development Division are the files concerning Certificates of Public Purpose and Necessity. A certificate had to be obtained to get government assistance for loans and grants. Within these files are documents concerning what each business did, or would do, and reasons that the assistance was needed. The files were reviewed, and a decision was made on what assistance to offer. Each file is very thorough, including both financial documentation and statements from the business owners.

Within the Media and Communications Division, there are also some interesting records . In 1974, the movie "W.W. and the Dixie Dance Kings" was filmed in Tennessee. The Department assisted with the recruitment of people for roles in the movie. Included with this record group are those files, which consist of correspondence, informational sheets, and photographs of those interested in parts in the movie. Unfortunately, there are no files which indicate which people were chosen for parts.

Within the Division of Community Development there is a slide presentation, including audiocassette, concerning Floodplain Management that was produced in 1984. This presentation was retained and is located in the TSLA Vault, VIII-D-4v.

The Department of Economic and Community Development has played a vital role in the lives of all Tennesseans since its inception. The department has worked extensively to promote the welfare of Tennessee residents. Today, this work is still being carried out, as Tennessee attempts to lure industry into the state.

Record Group 210, Department of Economic and Community Development, offers an interesting historical perspective on work done in Tennessee. This collection will offer research opportunities into the history of modern industrial recruitment in Tennessee.
